NF Marches Forward in Britain

The National Front continues to be the leading force of White Nationalism in Great Britain, and is the only real political alternative in a country facing massive unemployment, continued social decay, governmental corruption and racial tension. The NF is currently headed by 28 year old Nick Griffin, a Cambridge law graduate. Under his dynamic leadership the struggle in England has entered a new phase of activism based on a revolutionary ideology dedicated to solutions for that country's political, social, and economic ills.

The NF has been especially successful in its efforts at public outreach, whether through local marches or "White Power" rock concerts. Americans have much to learn from the efforts of our comrades accross the ocean, not just in terms of organization, but also in dedication and idealism.

Nowhere is this seen more profoundly than in the current conflict in Northern Ireland. Ever since Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher signed the infamous Hillsborough Agreement last year, which is a further step in selling Ulster out to the Dublin government, a revolutionary situation has existed in N. Ireland.

Slowly but surely the people of Ulster have come to realize that Thatcher's regime is no longer interested in their well-being. The NF knows this and is urging the Protestants of N. Ireland to seek independence and break away from the System which has now turned on them. Residents of Ulster realize that the old time Loyalist solutions of men like Ian Paisely and

An Ominous Silence

On February 20th, Brazil announced that it was suspending its interest payments to foreign banks on $70 billion of its $108 billion debt. This extraordinary news was greeted with silence by the banking community, and those bankers who were prodded to comment by the media implied that this was not an important development. Brazil is the largest debtor in the world (except for the U.S.) and Mexico runs a close second. The silence of the banking community indicates a very great alarm. Whenever really bad news hits, bankers try to play it down in order to avoid a panic - you can judge the extent of the problem by the depth of their silence. Normally they would be threatening Brazil with dire consequences in order to get the Brazilians to come up wiith more money. But now they are convinced that they are near the bottom of the well, not only in Brazil but in Mexico and Argentina as well.

Brazil, Mexico and Argentina are all struggling with just interest payments - repayment of principal is not even a question any more. At the end of February Argentina was granted a new $500 million loan so that it could meet its present interest payments. The bankers know now that all of their rescheduling efforts have failed to solve the problem, and the only thing they can do is give more money to the debtor nations in the hope that they will one day recover economically. This is a very dangerous game because they may be just throwing good money after bad which could cause an even more dire financial situation to arise. So they are in a real quandry which they must cover up.

PILLARS OF SAND

If they do not lie about the magnitude of the problem then there could be a panic in the public at large which would cause a 1930s-style run on the banks. A large run will break the soundest and best managed bank because of the nature of the system. Banks lend out most of the money (usually up to 80%) that has been deposited with them by their depositors. They are required to keep the rest on reserve to guard against a run - the situation where a large number of depositors come to the bank to withdraw their money. If there is a run on one bank then the Federal government or state government will step in to provide enough funds to cover the run. But what if 40% of all depositors at all banks want their money at the same time? This is what happened during the Great Depression when the collapse of a few banks caused a loss of faith in the banking system and a panic ensued. Could such a thing happen again? The bankers say no because we have a different system with larger reserves, but the fact is that if the panic is widespread around the country, the government will be once again forced to close all the banks in the country just as it did in 1933. When they would reopen would depend on the success of the government in restoring faith in the financial system. It is possible that the government would not be able to stem the panic and then the financial system and probably the government itself would collapse. The system is built on pillars of sand, and that is why bankers are so careful about what they say.

STOCK MARKET THRILLS

In another ominous development the stock market continues to skyrocket upwards, in total disregard of the bad economic news that is battering the country and the world. Our GNP is faltering, new orders for durable goods are falling, we now have a huge trade deficit, the national debt is stupendous, unemployment shows no signs of abating, capital equipment purchases are falling, the international debt crisis is looming again, the government is paralyzed by Iranscam, and Wall Street itself is in the midst of its worst corruption scandal, yet the stock market breaks new records every week.

Conventional economic theory says that the market is a predictor - that it represents what stock buyers think the economy will look like in six months. Moreover, stock price represents the true value of a company at least in the average. Applying this conventional theory to the present situation causes some problems. In light of all of our economic problems do stock traders really believe that things are going to boom in six months? In 1982 the market was at about 700 points, and now it is over 2100 points. Has the true value of American companies tripled in the last five years? Have their earnings tripled or even doubled? Have their assets tripled or even doubled? The answer to these questions is no. So how is it that the stock market has tripled? The theory is obviously faulty, but this has not convinced our brilliant economists and financial analysts to give it up or even look for an alternative.

THE PRECHTER CRASH

The exception to the rule is Ronald Prechter. Prechter is a stock market analyst who eschews conventional analysis in favor of the Elliot Wave Theory. Elliot was a Depression era accountant who based his analysis of the stock market on psychological waves of buying and selling based on the calculations of a 13th century Italian mathematician named Leonardi Fibonacci who first noticed these trends in human activities and developed mathematical formuli to describe them. It sounds like mystical nonsense, but it apparently works. It worked for Elliot and it is now working for Prechter. Since 1980 Prechter has been right on target in his predictions, even forecasting that the market would break 2100 in early 1987. This last prediction was widely criticized and so Prechter's critics have now been stunned into silence.

On ABC's Nightline show Ted Koppel asked Prechter what he saw for the market over the next two years. He replied that the market would rise to 3300 points by the end of 1988. "And then what?" asked Koppel. And then it will crash said Prechter. What was amazing about this TV moment was that neither of the other two stock market experts on the show would naysay Prechter's prediction of another 1929-style crash in 1989. This should give you some idea of how much faith our financial experts have in our financial system. GG

Workers Grow Poorer

It's official: White male workers in the US are being forced out of middle-income and into low-income jobs.

A couple of economics professors studied US job trends from 1963-85 for Congress' Joint Economic Committee (JEC), and the New York Times published a summary of their study. The study showed that 44% of net job gains in the US since 1979 paid poverty-level ($7400/year) wages, or worse; that new middle-income ($7400 to $29,600/year) jobs dropped almost 30%; that "manufacturing has not added a single new job to the economoy since 1979"; and that, faring worse than any other "demographic" (read: racial) group, White males' net job gains since 1979 were mostly (75%) at the low end of the pay scale.

This JEC study, performed and commissioned by System Liberals, was intended to embarrass System Conservatives and the Reagan regime, and the alarming facts reported about job trends for Whites were, of course, only a remark in passing from the good professors. Like the plutocratic Congress that commissioned them and the alien-dominated Media that published them, these System-oriented economists were not, it is safe to assume, in the least concerned about economic misfortune for Whites per se.

Still, the facts are there for anyone with racial and national consciousness to examine. The economic policies of the Reagan gang, like those before it, serve the interests of international financiers and "multi-national" corporate Capitalists. These entities are consistently pro-profit, anti-worker, anti-national, and anti-White. Their long-term drive to export jobs (to non-White regions where wages are abysmally low) and to import non-White labor (eager to take low-paying jobs) has been intended to depress wage levels for native White workers, thereby boosting corporate profits. The JEC study documents the success of this drive.

System Liberals in Congress, looking ahead to the 1988 elections, will surely try to make political hay from this study. But it is just possible that the White worker, tired of being treated like the rear portion of a horse's anatomy, will increasingly scorn both versions of the same System scam. The young White worker, in particular, will be more receptive to a Movement calling for real democracy, genuine free enterprise, and true Nationalism; a Movement holding the interests of White culture dear to its heart.

The NDF is that Movement, and its hour approaches quickly. SM

the "Fur Coat Brigade" can no longer work.

As a result, young NF leaders, such as John Field have made rapid strides forward in local organizing with the people of Ulster. Already the party has opened a new bookstore in Belfast, is now running four active branches and sells an average of 11,000 papers every month in the area. This has of course caught the attention of the British government which has attempted to repress growing nationalist sentiments amongst the Protestants of N. Ireland. A number of NF members have been dragged in on trumped up charges of anti-police violence. Prisoners often spend months in jail under harsh and humiliating conditions before being brought to trial. Political dissidents are customarily tortured and beaten during interogation and are placed in cells reminicent of medieval dungeons. The authorities have been brtual in their crackdown, yet this has only made activists all the more determined.

The people of Ulster can no longer be appeased, and all parties, including the corrupt British government have come to realize this. The NF has offered the only plan which will protect the rights and cultural heritage of the Protestants of N. Ireland, and in the months to come we may see great changes take place which will make the National Front a force to be contended with. Once the National Front has established a foothold of strong and deep rooted support in Ulster they will be that much more of a threat to the schemes of the plutocrats on the mainland of Britain. MM

Dear NDF,

I have just returned from seeing the new film PLATOON. Having seen all the hype about this film (TIME Magazine calls it "Vietnam as it really was") I was more than prepared to like it. What I found instead was one of the most nauseating pieces of political propaganda that I have ever had the misfortune to witness.

Director Oliver Stone, himself a Vietnam veteran, presents the American soldiers as crazed hop-heads, rapists, murderers of innocent Vietnamese and murderers of each other. The film depicts a surrealistic panorama of the war in which the American soldier was not so much at war with the enemy, as at war with himself.

No doubt Americans in this war committed atrocities. This happens in all wars as men find themselves placed in situations that no sane man could survive. But by selecting just these scenes, Stone is making a political statement about the war and the men who fought it. PLATOON is not history, but it is the director's statement of how it was, and the type of men who fought there. After presenting scene after scene of the Americans murdering, burning, raping, and killing each other (Stone says that we were not so much at war with the enemy, as we were art war with each other), the director has the nerve to place a postscript to the movie dedicating it to those men who fought there. PLATOON is not how it really was, but it is about the way the ruling elites want us to view the world and any future conflicts America might find itself in. It is political liberalism (masochism) at its worst. Judging from the way it is being hyped by the media, it is probably the kind of movie that Hollywood loves to honor with an Academy Award. Oliver Stone should take his thirty pieces of silver. He has earned it.

Sincerely,
Don Hunt

Dear Gary,

Your publication seems to be getting steadily better. Of course, the most recent issue was particularly interesting because it featured details of the gathering in Raleigh. The striking photos added quite a lot to the issue.

I enjoyed reading your "personal note on the media". The examples you gave of media manipulation were good, I thought, but you might have given greater emphasis to the way in which the media misrepresents by omission rather than by direct distortion. For example, it's instructive to compare the American media's highly critical and emotional coverage of Austrian President Kurt Waldheim with its coverage of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Despite all the media hoopla about Waldheim's allegedly sinister past, even the Israeli government had to eventually, but quietly, admit that it had no evidence to show that the wartime German officer ever had any involvement in atrocities against Jews. By contrast, the media has all but totally ignored Shamir's well-documented past as a terrorist. As a top leader in the notorious Jewish terrorist organization, the "Stern Gang", he was personally involved in the planning of the 1944 assasination of British Middle East Minister Lord Walter Moyne and the 1948 murder of Swedish U.N. envoy Count Folke Bernadotte, as well as numerous other less spectacular criminal acts. And while Jewish organizations have effectively banned Waldheim from ever visiting the United States, our politicians and their Jewish benefactors roll out the red carpet for Shamir. It doesn't take much imagination to think of how devastatingly Dan Rather and his colleagues could portray Shamir, if they so wished.

3) To provide physical security, financial security, and social justice for all of our people.

4) To create a meritocracy which will find and develop our best young minds for service as top-level leaders, and which will reward talent with responsibility rather than with privilege.

5) To create a system of general and special education without equal in the world.

II. NDF Program Summary

1) Creation of separate and independent nations, on the soil of America, for the various races of the United States.

2) Establishment of a National Employment Agency to train and employ all of the jobless willing to work, and to create new industries and build new cities with this manpower.

3) Elimination of all welfare programs other than a revamped Social Security System and a National Health Program.

4) Creation of a simple system of graduated income taxation that will redistribute and equitably share the wealth of America.

5) Conversion of large corporations into worker cooperatives and creation of programs to vastly increase the number of small businesses and small farms in America.

6) Nationalization of the banks, energy companies, and defense contractors.

7) Execution of murderers, rapists, child molesters, drug dealers and habitual felons.

8) Creation of a one term, ten year, presidency with great legislative, executive and judicial powers.
